Welcome to AAC!

Whether this is your first time on the University of Denver campus, or if you’ve been here hundreds of times, all are welcome at the Anderson Academic Commons. This first issue of Installments is here to help you get acclimated and learn about more of our resources that are here just for you. Check out our website, library.du.edu, to find more services that we offer, and follow us on Facebook, Instagram, and Twitter @ducommons to keep up with the latest. Have questions about any of these stories? Reach out to the editor, Elia Trucks at elia.trucks@du.edu, to find out more.

Study Spaces

If you’re looking for a place to study, read, or chill this summer, look no further than AAC. We’ve got plenty of options for different kind of study habits.

The main floor and the south end of the upper floors are Collaborative Zones, so feel free to bring your friends and work on projects together. The noise of ideas is welcome here!

The upper northwest floor and the entire lower floor are Quiet Zones. Please whisper and silence your phone.

The Quinette Family Reading Room and Library Classroom 301 on the upper floor are Silent Zones. There is no talking, no group work, and no noise allowed.

Need someplace a bit more private? Large and Small Group Study Rooms are available to reserve on the upper and lower floors of the library. Visit http://go.du.edu/reserve-aac-study-spaces to make a reservation.

Watch TV and Movies

Catch up on TV and movies as you relax this summer. The library has hundreds of DVDs to check out including popular movies and TV shows for you to binge. We also have access to streaming databases like Kanopy and Swank that have documentaries, films, and more. Check out our Research Guide to find out how to watch: libguides.du.edu/streaming

Stay Cool with Technology from AAC

The library has more to check out than just books. Our DVD collection includes hundreds of DVDs, from feature films to indie documentaries. Located on the upper floor by the main staircase, the DVDs are housed beside our video game collection. Check out a new video game and a console from the Lending desk to explore new worlds. Consoles available for check out include XBOX, Playstation 3 and 4, and Nintendo Wii.
